Frank Willis, Mary Dantzler Will Play Leading Roles

"Peter Pan," the immortal story by Sir James M. Barrie, which will open for a week's run at the Guignol theater on May 14, presents some outstanding juvenile actors of the "little theater." Frank Willis and Mary Dantzler, sophomores at the University will play the title role and Wendy, respectively, and David Salyers, freshman, will play the part of the reader, Sir James M. Barrie. Salyers, who is making his first appearance in the Guignol theater, sits in his drawing room and reads the story, which is that of a little boy who does not want to grow up. At certain points he stops and the curtain of the inner stage is raised and the action takes place. "Peter Pan" is in five acts and has five different sets.

The play introduces fairies, pirates, Indians and lost boys who fell out of their carriages when their nurses' backs were turned, and when they were not claimed in five days were sent to the "Never Land."

In addition to the night performances there will be a special children's matinee on May 19.

PUBLIC HEALTH TO BE OFFERED

Five Weeks' Course Planned in Summer Session; Dr. Adams to Head Department

THREE CREDITS GIVEN

The University is offering a five-weeks course for public health nurses during the first term of the summer session and will place special emphasis upon community health education as a strategic point of attack in the public health nursing program, according to Doctor Adams, head of the summer session department. All courses in the public health school will give college credit.

The Community Health Education course, offered by Miss Elma Rood of the State Board of Health, will give three credits. The course is a graduate course and, although not numbered in the bulletin, will be scheduled as Hygiene 160.

The classroom will be equipped so that demonstration lessons may be presented as nearly as possible as they would be carried on in the rural home. In the child health conference, in the hygiene class for rural mothers, or at the county teachers' institute. The demonstration lessons will be preceded by a class study of aims and a discussion of the most effective methods to fit any particular community group. At the close of the lesson, the procedures will be analyzed to determine whether the aims have been realized and whether results may be measured.

Students also will be given an opportunity to plan original lessons to fit their own particular situations and to present these before the group. Class discussions and individual conferences will aim to give constructive suggestions for improvement.

Special help also will be given to nurses in feature story writing, as a means of interpreting more clearly to the public the various phases of their programs. This course will be under the supervision of Mr. Niel Plummer, department of journalism, and Mr. John W. Kelly, State Board of Health.

Senator Stanley Strongly Urges Support of Schools

By DAVE SALYERS

"Next to the maintenance of the courts, the support of schools should be the prime consideration of any legislative body, and it is my hope that the schools of Kentucky will be given support," declared A. O. Stanley, former governor of Kentucky and for six years United States Senator, who recently visited the University.

Governor Stanley said to be one of the few governors of the state who really understood the University, came to the University on request of Omicron Delta Kappa, honorary leadership fraternity, to be made an honorary member of that organization. He was present at the spring initiatory services and also delivered the principal address at the banquet held at the Phoenix hotel following the initiation.

Governor Stanley attended the University, coming from Henderson, which is still his home town. Although he attended the University only two years, he engaged in many extra-curricular activities on the campus, and in 1888 received the singular honor of being the first representative of the University in oratory. His work in this field, for which he is nationally famous, began. At the end of his sophomore year at the University, his father, a Christian church minister, was moved to Danville and, in order to live with his family, Governor Stanley was forced to leave and move to Danville. He completed his higher education at Centre college, graduating the next year, thereby finishing college in three years. During his sojourn at the University, he lived on South Broadway. The University, according to the governor, then consisted of only a very few buildings, with an enrollment of approximately 500 students.

In 1903, Governor Stanley first began his service for the people with his election as congressman. He served in Congress from 1903 to 1915, where his golden tongue gained it a fame. In 1915, after a successful campaign over the state, he was elected governor of the state, giving up his post as congressman and coming to Kentucky.

Upon assuming the post as governor, he immediately began to take steps for the betterment of the University. His first move was to demand the resignation of all members of the board of trustees and elect an entirely new board. This board's first duty was to select a new president and, in 1917, Frank Lerond McVey was chosen.

Governor Stanley is now practicing law in Washington, having maintained his offices there for many years. In 1930, he was appointed to serve as chairman of the International Joint committee, and he still holds this position. The work of the committee is concerned with the upkeep and supervision of the inland waterways between Canada and the United States.

The governor's son, Marion Stanley, attended the University several years ago and was killed in an airplane crash near Lexington airport.

UK MEETS CINCY IN RETURN GAME

Devereaux's Men Are Out to Avenge Previous Defeat at Hands of Bearcats

BIG BLUE HAS BAD YEAR

Coach Pat Devereaux will take his University baseball team to Cincinnati this morning for a return game with the University of Cincinnati Bearcats which will begin at 2:30 p. m. The Wildcats lost in the first encounter, last Saturday at the Eppings ball park, 3 to 0, to a superior hitting Bearcat team.

The Bearcats are favored to take the second encounter against the Wildcats, due to their superior hitting, despite the strenuous hitting practice that Coach Devereaux has been giving his men during the last week.

Evans, who held the Wildcats to three hits in the first game is slated to start on the mound for the Bearcats. Rogge, heavy hitting catcher, will be behind the bat and is expected to give the Kentucky hurlers plenty of trouble.

Baseball, renewed at the University for the first time this season since 1931, has not enjoyed a very successful season, but Coach Devereaux has worked hard with the scant material that has been available and, if given enough time to condition his next year's material, will probably produce a winning team. So far this season, the Wildcats have won one game and lost five.

Only three more games remain on the Kentucky schedule, a game each with Marshall and Morehead at Lexington and a game with the University of Louisville at Louisville.

BEWARE EXAMS!

The month of May hurries another school year to its place in ranks of University history, and also toward examinations which will pounce with seeming viciousness upon students who have given little thought to studies since warm weather and moonlight nights have come into their own.

With less than three weeks in which to prepare term papers, notebooks, and other research work, students will encounter somewhat an ordeal. Many will "give up the ghost," and among these there will be an astonishing percentage who could have passed the neglected classes if they had made a final effort during the remaining weeks of the school year.

"Cramming" is not an advisable solution, but there are hours of application which could produce a great change in scholastic rating if vigorously used in study.

Every student has made considerable investment in himself by coming to school. It is only good business sense to get the most for one's money by making a serious attempt to pass all classes. Playing soon can be resumed, and play, after a feeling of accomplishment, can not be excelled for sheer enjoyment.

INTELLECTUALITY

Nowadays to call a young man an intellectual is almost an insult. To call him a regular fellow is to bestow upon him an honor. Possibly the condition is not at all pernicious, but it is certainly most open to adverse criticism.

Why should it be considered cause for humiliation to be called an intellectual? Perhaps the question is somewhat exaggerated, but it does seem that there is almost a stigma attached to the fact of being one who, possessing unusual mental capacity, uses it to acquire learning and education, to learn how to think clearly, without prejudice, and to improve himself by mental training.

We are not advising young persons to become prudes or impractical idealists. We are only saying that the well rounded personality, the type of personality that is most likely to bring happiness as the years pass by, is the kind in which one can display not only joy in physical and social accomplishments, but also in mental attainments. It really is not so difficult to become cognizant of the affairs of the world, to know the whys and wherefores of current happenings, to be able to discern truths from untruths, and to know how to think clearly and impartially.

To suppress worthwhile individuality merely to conform to a standardized idea, custom, or practice, is nonsensical. Experience has shown that herd action has many times leveled the ambitions and aspirations of able men, who did not have sufficient backbone to stand up for what they believed. We are not speaking of foolhardiness. We are speaking of logical thinking—that which was trampled in the dust by ignorance.

All common doctrines are not false, but many common practices are faulty. If you believe a thing, do not be swayed by fear of not being considered a regular fellow into doing that which you do not want to do. Of course, disagreeing with everybody and conforming with nothing is as obnoxious as the other extreme. A happy medium of clear thought and action, with due regard for the rights and opinions of others, is the desirable result.

JEST AMONG US

Gussie says: "About the only chips of wood any of us carry around on our shoulders any more are those attached to our necks."

Kentucky legislators have been advised by telegraph of the special session; it might have been safer to have telephoned certain illiterate members.

Even the proof-reader was surprised to see by Tuesday's Kernel that Judge Lyman Chaikley was a member of the Law college faculty for 212 years.

The University of Kentucky always has been noted for its courageous youth, this fact being further evidenced by the lengthy pin list just released.

Walter Hillenmeyer was so engrossed in the charms of Louis Hillenmeyer's old girl that he forgot about traffic and nearly caused a wreck on East Main...Are you going to stand for this heavy courting, Eubanks?

FLASH—The Hughes Jackson and Virginia Brown, Tridelt, affair appears to be having difficulties...Is he taking you to the Phi Delta formal at Centre Saturday, Brown?

George Weir, Phi Delta, has discovered new enjoyment in the company of one of Lexington's attractive soda-jerkers...?

"One Nite" Tom Conrey was seen with Pearl Markwell at Club Joy...was it lots of fun, Tom?

FLASH—How is it that a certain sorority house president can keep her constant dater until 11:15 when other girls have to send their lovers away at an earlier hour? That was quite a lengthy and touching scene, too. Are all your good nights like that?

LITERARY

Conducted by DOROTHY WHALEN

"One Smoke Stories," a cleverly written work by Mary Austin, is becoming well known for its witty sayings, as a sample: "A hungry stomach makes a short prayer," "After dark all cats are leopards," "One Take—this is better than two I-will-gives." And—who was the idea first? "A sparrow in the bush is better than a vulture flying."

Evidently Lord David Cecil does not think very highly of Sir Walter Scott. In his introduction to "Short Stories by Sir Walter Scott" is contained this rather sarcastic tribute to Sir Walter: "The short-story form was best for him because it gave least scope to his faults."

"The Hundredth Man" will in all probability be quite interesting to read since the author, Cecil Lenoir has written his confessions as a drug addict "who literally went down into the pit" but managed to come back. Lenoir rather impresses one as "a modern De Quincey."

The former Moscow writer for the Manchester Guardian, Malcolm Muggeridge, has written a book called "Winter Moscow," which will be published about May 11. Mr. Muggeridge evidently had a hard time getting the news. "Foreign journalists are not free agents in Russia," he says, "but work under the threat of always losing their visas and therefore their jobs." Unless they consent to what they know will not be displeasing to the dictatorship of the proletariat they are subjected to persecution. All of which goes to show that journalists do not lead the life of Riley.

Ruth Eleanor McKee, author of "The Lord's Anointed," a sound substantial chronicle novel of the early missionary days in Hawaii, is not of missionary blood...she is a Californian who went to Honolulu as a librarian and studied the old missionary documents in the library of the University of Hawaii. She hates swimming which makes Hawaii a strange choice for her. Elizabeth Jenkins, author of "Harriet," a gruesome and blood-chilling psychological murder story, never reads detective yarns, and is not interested in crime...She found the material for "Harriet" in the Stanton case, one of the British trials series, which she read because Sir Henry Hawkins, once called "Hanging Hawkins," lived in her home town.

Everybody admits it is brilliant, but some think the structure is defective, some that the temper in which it is written and the persons depicted are out-dated; that Mr. Fitzgerald has been abroad too long...The structure seems to be technically excellent; the episodes presumably irrelevant, are actually fitted in most skillfully for a special purpose...But the implication that the characters were destroyed by circumstance, by the confusion of the post-war years, is untenable.

Those characters would have gone to pieces anyway...They could find no excuse for being good in any period...And Mr. Fitzgerald usually writes about morons, anyhow. The flappers who are portrayed in his stories would all be in homes for the feeble-minded if the creator did not thoughtfully endow them with wealthy parents.

Those interested in art might be thoroughly entertained by the picture displays in the library. There are some rather exquisite and brightly colored plates in chromolithography and in monochrome from Ornamental Arts in Japan by George Ashdown Audsley, pictures of wood cuts, modeling enamel, lacured work, laquer, and textile fabrics.

It isn't the heat, it's the humidity...that annoys glass insulators, too!

Even glass insulators behave badly toward telephone currents when humidity is high. This has been proved by experiments at Bell Telephone Laboratories.

When it's humid, a film of moisture forms on the glass. The more humid, the thicker the film—and the more electrical current escapes! Important factors governing amount of leakage are the chemical nature of the glass, its shape and age, the amount and kind of dirt on its surface.

Through exhaustive studies, telephone men have developed more efficient types of glass insulators—and are seeking ways to make them still better. Close attention to every detail of Bell System equipment leads to constantly improving service.

U.K. TENNIS TEAM BEATS XAVIER 6 TO 1

The Varsity tennis squad took its second match of the week Wednesday afternoon from the Xavier university team of Cincinnati by a score of 6 to 1. Although the score might appear one-sided, the meet was characterized by several interesting matches.

McKebber played in fine style to defeat "Chuck" Randall 2-6, 6-3, 6-3, to win the only match taken by the Cincinnatians during the afternoon. He was the outstanding man on the visiting team. Dorsey, who lost a three-set match to Tullock, displayed a fine serve but lacked ability to follow with good court play.

The remaining scores in the single matches: Bishop defeated Moeller, 5-7, 6-3, 6-3; Yost defeated Jeffery, 6-1, 6-0; Tullock defeated Dorsey, 6-1, 4-6, 6-2, and Rush defeated Diskin, 6-1, 6-0.

In the double matches Jenkins and Weed defeated Moeller and Jeffery, 6-4, 6-3, and Moore and Stahr worked hard in their first set to win a 13-11 victory over McKebber and Dorsey, but came back to take the next set in comparatively easy style by a 6-3 count.

Returns from the game played yesterday afternoon against the University of Cincinnati on the Queen City school's courts were not in at Kernel press time. The team left yesterday morning and were to return last night.

Intramural

With but a few more days remaining in which to complete the intramural schedule for this year the intramural managers, capably assisted by Mr. Hackensmith, have been pushing contestants to the limit. Their efforts have produced results and there remains only a few events to be run off. In almost every division the quarter-finals and semi-finals have been reached.

The finals in two ball foursome have been reached by representatives of the Sigma Chi and Phi Delta Theta fraternities, these being Bush and Boland and Brock and Hunt respectively. This match will be played off this week.

Bringardner reached the semi-finals in the tennis singles when he defeated Crowden in the quarter-finals. He is the sole occupant of a berth in this bracket. Dazzler, who is favored to cop the singles crown, won his way into the quarter-finals when he defeated Mills, former freshman numeral man. In the only doubles match played since Tuesday, Finley and Elliot, nosed out Gottshall and Bringardner.

In horse-shoes the favorites still remain to dominate the play. Endicott and his running mate, Coffman, have fought their way into the semi-finals where they are scheduled to meet Faber and Butler. The other semi-final bracket is possessed by the Alpha Gamma Rho shoe-throwers. By some trick of fate, the two Alpha Gamma Rho teams have both won their way into the same bracket and it remains for them to fight it out for a position in the finals.

This spring, Hal Kemp and his musicians have played at the proms of Michigan, Wisconsin, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Ohio university and Purdue.

Walter Marty, Sacramento junior college high jumper, recently set a new world's record in the high jump when he cleared the bar at 6 feet 9½ inches.

SHOP SIGHTS

By MARY REES LAND

Mother's Day, Sunday, May 13. What Mother would not like a box of delicious candies from Mrs. Thomas' Candy Shop? There are special boxes with a copy of Whistler's "Mother" on the top. Inside are creams, chewies, nuts, and a decorated "Mother" mint. There are also Bavaria china plates filled with chocolates topped by bonbons. They come in many forms, such as flower bowls, ash trays, nut dishes, etc. Being white, they not only will add a fashionable touch to her room but they will be a lasting gift. She would even value one of the less expensive presents, for instance a small raffia basket or a tiny Dresden basket filled with candies.

Angelucci & Ringo have an item which was quite popular at the southern resorts last winter. It is a platted fish-net belt in either canary, red, white, or blue. It is fast color and washable. Some block printed, French linen handkerchiefs with hand-rolled hems have just been received. They come in bright colors made up in unique designs, and they are large enough for choker scarfs.

The Washington Post, after telling the story of a little girl who said that she liked red shoes because she could walk faster in them, went on to say that that color will be "good" for sports wear. Baynham has a Pedigo red leather sandal with a heel of a nice height which will delight the child's big sister. Another sandal is of white linen trimmed generously with the same material designed in brown and white. A gold Grecian evening sandal has the low broad heel that first appeared in New York in the early spring. Ask to see the white zipper the sport shoe made of Mandruca.

Graduation time is nearing. Why not select your gifts now so as to avoid the last minute rush? Lawyers, musicians, scholars and all can find use for the zipper brief case of black leather from Wechter's. It actually has eight pockets inside without being cumbersome.

A less serious minded girl would like a vanity for loose powder that is made of a transparent composite and that has an old English garden scene on the top.

Four Cambridge university students won a 50 to 1 bet that they would not be able to walk 100 miles in 24 hours, by walking to London and back in the required time.

What is said to be the first nocturnal review in the nation was held by the cadet regiment at Clemson college last week.
